Choice Poetry.

THE DYING CALIFORNIAN.

Time—June's Eve.

Lay up nearer, brother, nearer, for my limbs are growing cold,
And thy presence seemeth dearer when thy arms around me fold;
I am dying, brother, dying, soon you'll miss me in your tent,
And my form will soon be lying 'neath the ocean's briny cant.

Hearken to me brother, hearken, I have something I would say,
Ere this veil my vision darken, and I go from hence away;
I am going, surely going, but my hopes in God are strong,
I am willing, brother, knowing that he doeth nothing wrong.

Tell my father when you greet him, that in death I prayed for him,
Prayed that I might one day meet him in a world that's free from sin;
Tell my mother God assist her, now that she is growing old,
That her son would glad have kissed her when his lips grew pale and cold.

Hearken to me, catch each whisper, 'tis my wife I speak of now,
Tell, Oh! tell her, how I missed her when the fever burnt my brow;
Hearken to me, closely listen, don't forget a single word,
That in death my eyes did glisten when the tears her memory stirred.

Tell her then to kiss my children, like the kiss I last impressed,
Hold them fast, as last I held them, folded closely to my breast;
Give them early to their Maker, putting all their trust in God,
And He never will forsake her, He has said so in His word.

O, my children, heaven bless them, they were all my life to me,
Would I could once more caress them, ere I sink beneath the sea;
'Twas for them I crossed the ocean, what my hopes were I'll not tell,
But they've gained an orphan's portion, yet He doeth all things well.

Tell my sister I remember every kindly parting word,
And my heart has been kept tender by the thoughts their memory stirred
Tell them I ne'r reached the haven where I sought the precious dust,
But I've gained a port called heaven, where the gold doth never rust.

Urge them to secure an entrance, for they'll find their brother there,
Faith in Jesus and repentance, will secure for them a share:
Hark, I hear my Saviour calling, 'tis, I know His voice so well,
When I'm gone, oh, don't be weeping, brother bear my last farewell.

Interesting Story.

WILLIE'S WIFE.

A BLUSTERING evening! I am alone. An old maid with no husband to destroy her peace, nor any dreadful annoyances in the shape of children, with money enough at interest to keep the wolf from the door, and a house of her own overhead, might surely expect, after the tea things were washed and put away, the fire made, the table drawn close to it, the lamp close to her elbow, and a book close to her nose—an old maid thus happily situated might, I say, in all reason, expect a comfortable time. Alas! far from it! The wind whistles around the house with more than ordinary defiance, and I tremble inwardly; for well do I know, and well does it know, also, the cracks and holes in my dilapidated dwelling. Here it comes whistling and roaring! with a whisk it turns my new wig askew: with another, the leaves of my book are flattering and flapping, as if they were in league with the boisterous thing. I adjust my wig and refind my place in vain! There it comes, again and again! A rough blast down the chimney sends the smoke pouring into the room, scattering a shower of ashes over my clean white curtains.

I slam my book with a petulent jerk, take up my lamp, and start on an indignant march up to bed. Creak, creak go the boards, as if they were possessed. The door refuses to open; I jerk and pull spasmodically; another blast of wind; my lamp goes out; still I tug at the door: it opens suddenly, and down I go. Miss Jemima Bloor picks herself up, minus dignity, temper and wig. I grope my way up stairs, stepping lightly on certain shaking steps, and running a splinter into my hand from the broken banister; I reach my room at last; must leave the door unlocked because the lock is out of order; undress, creep into bed, and cannot close my eyes, because there is a piece of loose plaster gaping just above my head—more terrible to me than the sword of Damocles.

During the long hours of that sleepless night I worked my self up to a desperate resolution. The case, you can see, was grave and urgent: I ran imminent risk of losing that bland, amiable disposition which (as I know from the concurrent testimony of my most discriminating friends) is natural to me. The house shall be thoroughly repaired! Not another night will I sleep here until it is!

I arose at peep of day, and noon found me domesticated at Mrs. Robinson's just over the way. I am to sleep on the lounge in the parlor, for the little woman possesses only two rooms and a kitchen.

I immediately assembled all the carpenters, glaziers, tinners, bricklayers, painters and paper hangers with whom our village is blessed. My house is being repaired and renewed outside and in. I contemplate the changes thus going on with—well let the truth be told—with somewhat mixed emotions. I am slowly coming to the conclusion that there is no such thing as perfect happiness in this sublunary sphere. Men are so intensely aggravating, especially carpenters, glaziers, tinners bricklayers, painters and paper hangers.

One afternoon we sat—my hostess and I—in her little parlor; I at the front window looking across the street and watching that rascal John Stocker, the carpenter. Good heavens! There he sat in my best room window, swinging his heels and smoking a pipe—not a thought of my work in his head! Now, the odious creature knows—no one better—what a hurry I am in and how I detest a pipe. Yet here I may be, for all he cares, sleeping on Mrs. Robinson's lounge for a month or two, and all the time my parlor—Mrs Jemima Bloor's best room—scented with tobacco! I wonder if the man expects to go to heaven when he dies? I wonder if he expects me to pay him three dollars a day for smoking his pipe and swinging his heels?

Ah! there comes Joseph Baldwin just back from his dinner, and—let me see—it's twenty-five minutes past two. If I had my way about woman's rights, I'd put the men out of this world altogether: that would settle the question. What are they, after all, but an aggravation, a marplot and a general nuisance.

Now, there goes Will Wiley, tramping right over my verbena bed! Has the man no eyes in his head? or did his mother never succeed in beating it into his head that a verbena-bed is not to be walked on, and that a garden-path is?

And now I think of it, it was only yesterday I found five broken panes in my up-stairs window. Yet that faithless, good-for-nothing glazier had sworn to me that very morning that he had taken every sash out, from garret to cellar, and left all in perfect order. Lords of creation, indeed! Lords of fiddlestick! Wonderful example of superior intellect—was it not?—to take a window-sash out for repairs and put it back in perfect order with five broken panes in it! If Miss Jemima Bloor were to sit in a maiden lady's best room window and smoke a pipe and swing her heels—if she were to come from dinner to her work at twenty-five minutes after two—if she were to go tramping about on people's verbena-beds—if she were to declare a window-sash with five broken panes in it to be completely repaired—would she call herself a lady of creation and a superior intellect? I ask the world, would she call herself a lord or a lady of creation as a su—

At this point my indignant reflections were interrupted by a soft splish-splash and a subdued little flutter of sobs.

My hostess had been knitting, with her comfortable fat hands, a baby's hood for Mrs. Peters, next door.

As I looked up I saw the tears trickle down on her knitting needles till they shone and winked at me in an impish manner.

This little woman is my mental cushion—my social rest. Mild, round and rosy in body and mind, crying is the only luxury she seems thoroughly to enjoy. The tears roll over her plump cheeks as if they were used to it, and leave them plumper than before. The round, light blue eyes are always ready for a shower, and look all the rounder and bluer after it is over. I never knew her to have an original idea: indeed, I think she never had but one very clear idea of any description. The thought of her whole life had been "her Willie." Mrs. Robison, although a weak little woman enough, has had a curious history of her own.

She was an orphan: had married, at twenty, William Robinson, a sailor of the town, and had moved into her present home, with her husband and an old uncle with whom she had lived before her marriage. Two months afterwards young William sailed for India. The appointed time for his return had passed: month by month went by, and still his wife looked for him who never came. After two years the old uncle was laid at rest, and the little woman was left quite alone.

How she waited and watched—watched all through youth, all through middle age—waited and watched in vain through twenty long, long years!

In all that time her one thought when she rose in the morning was of "Willie:" her last thought when she laid down at night was of her lost husband. Nightly, long after we had gone to bed and she thought me asleep, her little figure would steal from the bed-room and kneel in a spot she had often shown me, where Willie had said his last good bye, and there she would pray, in a low, soft voice, the words always the same: "My God, take me home to my Willie; oh, come and take me! Willie, my husband, come back and take me!" And then she would creep away to her room as quietly as she came.

By the fireplace stood Willie's arm-chair: out in the pantry were Willie's cup and saucer, carefully, tenderly washed every day. Over the mantlepiece hung Willie's picture—to her, that of a beautiful hero; to me, that of a very commonplace young man with blue eyes, light curling hair, large features and a turned-up nose. I have seen love, devotion, infatuation, all manner of mischief brought on through men; but never, in all my experience, had I encountered such complete merging of one life into another. To her, Willie seemed to be not all this world only, but all she dreamed of in the world to come. She did not think of him as on earth, but as in heaven.

The little woman's mind and heart were a study to me. I was sitting, with my hands in my lap, thinking her over, she still knitting, and the click of the needles diversified by the splash, just audible, of the large, comfortable tears on her neat black silk, when we were both startled by a vigorous swing of the gate and a heavy step on the gravel. A moment and the door was flung open, and suddenly, without word or gesture, a large, weather-beaten, rough-looking man stood, like an apparition, before us. A long, purple scar, crossed his forehead and cheek, gave a [illegible] expression to one eye. He stared at us and gazed about the room for some time without speaking; at last he fastened his eyes on Mrs. Robinson. She crept behind me and whispered, "Please send him away Miss Jemima; see how he stares! Dear, dear! what a dreadful man!"

"What do you wish sir?" I inquired, boldly enough, I think, although quaking internally, for he had now transferred his eyes to me.

"Does Mrs. Mary Jane Robinson live here?" The harsh voice made us both start.

"Yes; I am Mrs. Robinson." said the little woman, retreating further behind me. Suddenly I was seized, chair and all, and deposited in the middle of the room; the next moment the stranger lifted Mrs. Robinson and gave her a bear-like hug, the little woman struggling and screaming with all her might. I ran to the door, intending to call for help; but the words "Mary, my wife, don't you know me?" struck me dumb. I turned in amazement. He still held her in his arms. She had ceased struggling, and was looking at him with strange, wild, shining eyes. Was her mind shaken? Had the shock been too much for her?

"Let her go; you will kill her!" I cried, scarcely knowing what I said.

He put her down gently, still holding her hand. She stood quite still and passive, as if frozen, the two fixed, bright eyes staring from her death-white face. The man looked from one to the other in a frightened way.

"Do you think I've frightened her out of her wits?" he asked in an uneasy whisper, as she stood with her eyes riveted on his face.

"I dare say you have," I blurted out curtly, as I turned to Mrs. Robinson. "Mary, my dear, what is it?" taking her passive hands in mine. She made no motion, not even shifting her eyes. "Won't you speak to me, Mary?" The eyes turned to me, and, slipping her hands from mine, she groped in the air like a blind person. It was terrible to see!

"Mary," I said, desperately, "it is your husband come back to you"—anything, I thought, to rouse her; "won't you speak to him?"

"Yes," said Mr. Robinson, eagerly, "I am your husband, don't you know me, Mary? Ain't you glad to see me my dear?" The tears stood in his eyes, and although they could not soften the look of the scarred one, still I could see a dim—a very dim—likeness to the picture over the mantelpiece, and could no longer doubt his identity. Deep lines seemed to grow in the little woman's face as he spoke to her; the very roundness appeared to fall into sharp, angles, such as long years of sorrow had failed to produce.

"Send him away; tell the man to go away. Cannot he go away?" cried she piteously.

"No, my dear," said her husband: "I have come to stay, and I thought you'd be glad to see me." His rough voice trembled a little. "See, I've carried your picture with me thro' thick and thin. When we were shipwrecked I thought about it, and tied it up water-proof, so I should have that, any way; and all them long years, when Tom Bright and George Griffith and me used to sit in our hut o'nights and talk over our wives and homes, your picture used to look so hopeful like—just like you use to look them first two months—I almost forgot I was a shipwrecked sailor, thousands of miles away. Oh, Mary, the long days and the weary nights, and the weeks and the months and the years! Yes child, it was awful dreary-like, and your picture got dim and blurred, and I grew old and gray afore my time; and George, poor fellow!—he died of a queer kind of a fever, and we buried him, decent as we could, under the big palm just above the hut. Then Tom and I led a rough kind of life: we got savage like, and didn't seem to care much about anything."

There he paused and looked at Mary sitting motionless: "I thought, sometimes, if ever I did get back, it would be kind o'hard for you to get used to me and my ways, and I'd feel awkward with decent folks. It was nigh on twenty years, I think, before we was found; but I thought, maybe you'd be kind o'glad to see me any way." And the poor fellow broke down, and looked wistfully at his wife.

But the little woman's mind seemed quite gone. She did not answer him a word, and had again fallen into that fixed, unnatural stare. I thought I might rouse her by calling her thoughts back to daily things. "Mary, dear," I said, "Mr. Robinson must be hungry after his journey: wont you get him some supper?"

She left the room without a word, moving mechanically, like one in a dream. Half an hour passed, during which Robinson had given me a sketch of his shipwreck. It was the old story—the same, with variations, that De Foe and Tennyson and Adelaide Proctor have told. He and his two companions had been washed on an island, rich in beautiful vegetation, but infinitely dreary in its solitude through the long, long years of watching to which the castaways were doomed. He told me how hope had died out, when one morning at sunrise, they saw a ship steering for the island, signaled her, and were taken on board. She was "The Zephyr," bound for New York, and in little more than two months she brought them home.

When Robinson had finished his story, I went out to see what had become of his wife. She was in the pantry, standing before Willie's cup, and the blessed tears were streaming down her face. As soon as she saw me she fell on my neck, sobbing convulsively.

"Must I give him Willie's cup? No lips have touched it since he went away. How can I give it to that man?" I let her cry until she was exhausted; then I raised her gently and carried her to bed.

"Lie there fifteen minutes, dear: by that time I shall have supper ready."

She obeyed as a little child might. When I went to her she was waite and still, her lids closed. Alarmed, I called her hastily by name, and she raised her eyes to mine. There was still the same fixed glitter in them. I lifted her from the bed and arranged her dress; she was quite passive under my hands.

It was a dreary supper, and a more dreary evening. But at last it came to an end.

I lay half the night turning restlessly on my lounge. The moonlight poured across the room in a broad stream. Willie's picture looked down at me with an unearthly expression; Willie's arm-chair took weird forms in the dim light. I thought over the rapid succession of events, until my head grew dizzy with thinking. Then the reproachful eyes of the young Willie seemed staring at me from the dark corners of the room; and mingled with his youthful traits, came the rough features and sinister eye of the adult Robinson. Through this chaos of faces Mary's, too, came up, just as I had seen her when she stood at the door of her room, bidding me good night, her eyes large with terror, and her hand stretched out to me for help—for help alas! which how could I give her? For was he not her husband? And is it not to her husband that a woman must cleave?

Suddenly my heart stood still. The little woman herself crept noiselessly from the bed-room—her face looking horribly wan in the moonlight—crossed the parlor and knelt in the accustomed spot. Her hands were raised above her head; her upturned face was convulsed with an agony of appeal; but for a time no words came from her lips; she sank prostrate on the floor. "Willie has gone from heaven—gone from heaven! I have lost him! Oh, where is he?" Then she glided back as silently as she had come, but the bitter moan sounded in my ears the long night through.

The next morning she wore the same stony face. I stayed with her three weeks, and then returned to my own home, which had, meanwhile, been thoroughly renovated. I could sit in peace before my fireplace now, without fear of storms or risk of draughts. I could sit in peace, outwardly, but my mind had little rest. At intervals of two or three days I went over to see the little woman. Month by month her face grew smaller and her eyes larger and brighter. Their glitter haunted me.

More than a year passed. One cheerful morning, in early spring, I was ironing in the kitchen: a pleasant breeze came through the window; the blithe birds without made the orchard vocal with their lively twitterings, and a bed of strawberries in the garden delighted my eyes with its white blossoms. Life seemed pleasant to me this bright morning, and my hands moved briskly at my work.

A shadow fell across the ironing-board and caused me to look up. There was Mr. Robinson, standing in the doorway. The weather-beaten face had changed much in the year—an unhappy year it had been to him—but its events had stirred the gentler parts of his nature. He looked even sadder than usual this morning, and his voice was low and subdued;

"Miss Jemima, my Mary seems lower than common; she's clean given out and gone to bed. My rough hands and ways ain't no account in the sick-room; wouldn't you just step over and see if you could help her any? I wouldn't ask it if I could get along without."

"Instantly," I replied, putting on my bonnet. "I will lock up the house and go back with you."

I found Mrs. Robinson lying on her bed, the room darkened. She looked up and smiled—a sweet, dim smile—then, closing her eyes, she lay quite still. Hour after hour, that I sat by her bedside, she never moved nor spoke. In the evening I sent for the village doctor—a quiet, meek little man—who shook his head, looked doubtful, and left some powders.

And so she lay for five days and four nights. Sometimes she was feverish, and would turn and mutter; but usually she lay quite still, her small, thin hands folded, and that wonderful smile on her face. The evening of the fifth day the room was intensely still; Mr. Robinson and I sat watching the calm face, white as the pillow beneath it. Suddenly a light broke over her features. She flung her arms upward with a murmur of joy: "Willie, I am coming!"—sank back, her breathing growing shorter and feebler—a gentle, scarce

The Columbian.

BLOOMSBURG, PA.

FRIDAY MORNING, JUNE 19, 1868.

☞ THE COLUMBIAN has the Largest Circulation in Columbia and adjoining counties of any paper published here, and is also a much larger sheet than any of its cotemporaries; and is therefore the best medium for advertising in this section of the State.

Chicago Convention.

The States were then called, and each voted for Grant. The vote of Georgia was announced by Governor Brown, who said that the Georgia Republicans, many of whom were the original secessionists, recognized the maxim "Enemies in war; in peace, friends."

The above little paragraph has a world of meaning, and we desire to call the notice of our readers to it, and a few plain facts, about that convention.

Of what sort of material was it composed? It had among its members, in union, sympathy, and equality with them, some negro delegates from the South. It had in it if we are not mistaken, one of the most prominent bondsmen of Jefferson Davis, the incarnation of all wickedness, according to Radical theory. It had in it Gov. Brown of Georgia, an "original secessionist," and who represented "many original secessionist," as Radical republicans, in full standing with the party.

And this party of moral ideas follows Stevens an infidel and a miscegenationist, Butler a thief and a coward, Wade so profane and disgusting that Carl Shurtz says nobody would kill Grant because he wanted Wade, President.

When you see such men as Fillmore Winthrop, and Curtis, and Blair and Reverdy Johnson, and Judge Doolittle desert a party, it is easy to believe that it has lost caste and character: And when you find it led by darkies and secessionists, by Stevens and Forney, you know that it has fallen beneath contempt.

Dialogue on Perjury.

SCENE, United States House of Representatives.

Mr. Ross—I ask the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Thad. Stevens) whether, in his opinion, Senators would be justified in perjuring themselves for the purpose of procuring a conviction of the President?

Mr. Stevens—"Well, sir, I do not think it would hurt them."

The above, cut from the official proceedings of a Radical House of Representatives, shows Thad. Stevens to be the "same old coon" he was thirty years ago, when he is said to have advised a brother Member of the Penn'a. Legislature, to "throw conscience to the Devil, and stick to his party." He has grown older and bolder in sin and iniquity, and the remark thus made shows the utter and abandoned shamelessness of the old man's moral condition.

And yet there are men, and decent men too, and pious men, and men of otherwise fair character, who are so oblivious to everything, in their zeal for party, that they not only tolerate, but more than half defend such utterances and opinions. "Can such things be, and overcome us like a summer cloud without our special wonder?"

The Registry Law.

WE commend the following to the tax-payers of the county as exhibiting some of the workings of the new Registry Law:

Under the old law the election expenses of the county have averaged about	$ 400 00
Under the Registry Law, there are four officers to a district, sitting five days each, three of them at $1 50 each, per day; and the Assessor $1 00 per day—making in the 25 districts of the county,	687 50
At the instance of any five citizens of a district, the Court appoints two Commissioners to superintend the elections with the election Board, at $1 50 each—25 districts with two Commissioners, 50 in all,	75 00
	887 50
This amount, which will be increased by the extra labor necessary in printing the lists, cost of books, &c., will probably reach	1,000 00

It will be borne in mind that this sum of $1,000 is additional to the $400 of election expenses, as the Registry Board is entirely distinct and separate from the Election Board. The Registry Law therefore imposes upon the county an additional expense of $1,000. This looks very much like retrenchment!!

Grant vs. the Jews.

THE JEWS form a very large and important element in our population, and have more cohesiveness than any other race. They do not form an independent political element like the Irish, being divided on the questions of the day. We doubt, however, whether any of them who have a spark of self-respect left, can vote for Grant after reading the following order expelling them bodily, from his Department, and insulting every son of Abraham.

HEADQUARTERS 13TH ARMY CORPS. }
DEPARTMENT OF TENNESSEE, }
OXFORD, MISS., December 17, 1862.

GENERAL ORDERS NO. 11:

The Jews as a class, violating every regulation of trade established by the Treasury Department orders, are hereby expelled from the Department within twenty-four hours from the receipt of this order by post commanders. They will see that all this class of people are furnished with passes and required to leave, and any one returning after such notification shall be arrested and held in confinement until an opportunity occurs of sending them out as prisoners, unless furnished with permission from these headquarters. No passes will be given these people to visit headquarters for the purpose of making personal application for trade permits.

By order of Major-General Grant.

BEN BUTLER, the bold and the brave, has found another victim, a woman this time. A lady who has been engaged for some time past in the execution of a statue of Lincoln, is to be turned out of her studio and the unfinished labor of weeks suffered to go to decay, because she is suspected by the astute Butler of having influenced the vote of Senator Ross. This is not only insulting to the lady but also to the Senator. Butler never does things of this kind half-way; not even the memory of the late lamented Lincoln is able to restrain his desire to smash somebody or something.

Meeting of the Pennsylvania Reserve Association.

THE Third Annual Meeting of this body took place on Saturday, May 30th at Pittsburg, it being the anniversary of the last fight of the Corps at Bethesda Church, Va. Columbia County was represented by Gen. Ent and Capt. Brockway. The Academy of Music was secured for the occasion, and beautifully decorated by the Resident Committee, who also supplied each member as he arrived with an appropriate badge.

At 11.40 A. M. the Association was called to order by its President, Ex-Gov. Curtin, who, in a few brief words thanked the members for the honor of a re-election during his absence in Europe. The Secretary, Maj. Harvy, then read the minutes of the last Association, which were adopted. The next business in order being the election of a board of Directors, each Regiment having authority to elect three members, a recess of ten minutes was ordered to enable them to make their selection. From the 6th Reg't Col. W. H. Gore, Capt. Charles Allen, and Serg't. M. Dwyer were selected; from the 1st Arty. Maj. E. Meconkey, Capt. C. B. Brockway, and Serg't J. K. McGinnis.

Motions were then made that the next meeting be held at Lancaster, Philadelphia, and West Chester. The latter place was selected; and as the 30th of May next year will come on Sunday, the following Tuesday was substituted.

The new Board of Directors then withdrew, and elected the following officers for the ensuing year.

President—Hon. A. G. Curtin.

Vice President—Gen. Wm. McCandless.

Corresponding Secretary—Col. John H. Taggart.

Recording Secretary—Maj. John C. Harvey.

Treasurer— Col. John P. Taylor.

Col. Biddle Roberts was elected as the next orator.

The Association then adjourned to meet again at two o'clock in the afternoon.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The Association was called to order at two o'clock. Gen's. Sweitzer, Collis, Owen, and Coulter were elected honorary members. Gov. Curtin introduced then to the audience Mr. Vroom, a rising young artist, who exhibited the model of a statue of Gen. Reynolds, which it was proposed to erect to his memory at Gettysburg.

The orator of the day, Major Lemuel Todd of Carlisle, was then introduced, and delivered one of the most eloquent orations we ever listened to. For half an hour the audience listened spellbound, except when some unusually striking passage called forth their applause. The Association may well boast of so gifted a member. His allusion to "Pennsylvania's War Governor, A. G. Curtin," called forth deafening cheers, and it was some moments ere the speaker could proceed.

At the conclusion of the oration, the Association, preceded by the band, marched to Lafayette Hall, where a magnificent banquet had been prepared, and to which some 300 persons sat down. Gov. Curtin presided, and near him were Gens. Crawford, McCandless, Ent, Sweitzer, Anderson, Phillips, and hosts of other names as familiar in the Corps as household words. Full justice was done to the piles of solid food on the table, while the pyramids of ice-cream and mountains of Confectioner y did not long survive the charge of the Reserves, which, as usual, carried all before it.

The first toast was "The President of the United States." which was responded to with cheers, as was the toast to the Governor of Pennsylvania.

Third—The Memory of Washington.

Fourth—The Army and Navy.

Fifth—The volunteers during the late war. They acknowledge no superiors, and claim to have no rivals. [Three cheers.]

Sixth—The Pennsylvania Reserve Corps. Modesty forbids us to say anything of ourselves. [Cheers.]

General William McCandless responded, in his usual effective vein, and spoke of our dead in eloquent terms, delivering a fine eulogy upon Gen. McCall, who has died since the last meeting.

Seventh—To the memory of those of our comrades who have fallen. Ever green be the laurels they have won—ever fresh the memory they bequeathed to their country.

This sentiment was received in silence, and standing.

Eighth—A. G. Curtin. His wisdom conceived, his energy inaugurated, and his patriotism accomplished the great act of Pennsylvania in creating the Pennsylvania Reserve Corps.

This toast was received with cheers. Governor Curtin responded. He said that so much of his active life had been connected with the organization of troops, that he could scarcely separate from his mind that he was not one of the corps. Governor Curtin now gave a lengthy account of the organization of the Reserve Corps, stating how an order was received here for twenty-five additional regiments; how it was immediately filled, but the authorities at Washington refused their proffered services; how they were about being disbanded in consequence of the factious opposition manifested by the Legislature, then sitting at Harrisburg; how they were offered over and again to the Government, and as often rejected, and how subsequently they illustrated the glory and honor of the American army and saved the Capitol and the Nation. When the cry for assistance came, eleven thousand men from the State of Pennsylvania, thoroughly organized and equipped, responded. This was the first great army ever seen at Washington, as the Prussian Minister truthfully remarked.

In conclusion Governor Curtin alluded to the pledges to protect the widows and children of the soldiers, and asked if that promise had been fulfilled? No! it had not. On his return from Europe he was grieved and astonished to see so many of our brave defenders, who had lost an arm or a leg in the service, seated upon the sidewalks, grinding an organ to procure from public charity a mite sufficient to keep life in their bodies. He considered each cripple so employed a lasting monument against the pledges we had made. It was a deep disgrace, and he hoped no man would be helped or elevated to office, upon any consideration, who would not pledge himself to the fulfillment of the promised duty to our maimed soldiers. Applause.

Ninth—The survivors of the War of 1812 and of the Mexican War. We honor and revere them.

Tenth—The Ladies. God bless them.

This sentiment was replied to by Col. R. Biddle Roberts, in a humorous address which elicited much merriment. The Colonel concluded by paying an eloquent tribute to the memory of General Reynolds, killed at Gettysburg.

Eleventh—The resident committee of Pittsburg. To-day we have drank from the same canteen.

The reply to this toast came from Dr. Donnelly, who gave an interesting account of the services of the Medical Corps of the Reserves.

Gen. Ent was then loudly called upon, but declined for the reason that being a candidate before the people it would not be proper for him to address them at that time.

The next toast was "the artillery arm of the service" to which Capt. Brockway briefly responded.

Governor Curtin proposed "the healths of Major Generals Ord," and Meade which was greeted with three cheers.

"The Signal Corps of the Pennsylvania Reserves," was replied to by Major Morrill, and Major Hoyt made some brief remarks in reply to the "Commissary Department."

Governor Curtin made an appropriate and feeling closing address, and the Association adjourned after singing in chorus "Auld Lang Syne." The meeting had been a pleasant one, and not a single event occurred to mar its harmony. Political allusions were carefully excluded, and from this fact we predict the future success of the Association.

The new badge ordered by the association was then produced by Col. Taggart, who stated the price to be from $2.00 to $10.00 according to whether gold or silver was taken, and whether it was to be fastened by a pin on the back, or be suspended from a chain. The model was rejected on account of its high price, and because it did not have on it the arms of the State. On motion of Gen. Crawford it was ordered that the different arms of the service be represented on the badge, crossed cannons for the Artillery, etc.,

Landon.

REV. GEO. LANDON, is P. John's favorite candidate for the U. S. Senate, to succeed Hon. C. R. Buckalew. To show in what estimation he is held by his own party, we select the following extracts.

We regret to learn there is a strong probability that the Republicans of Bradford district will return Rev. George Landon to the State Senate, That he possesses uncommon abilities as a debater is acknowledged on all hands but he has made a reputation in other particulars which renders it highly desirable that he should be remitted to the duties of private life.—Pittsburg Gazette.

No Senator on either side of the Chamber was connected, by the common rumor of the lobby, with more corruption than the Rev. George Landon. We of course make no charge against Mr. L., nor do we repeat what others so frequently and so boldly alleged against him, but we do say that either George Landon was recklessly slandered last winter, or he willfully disregarded his oath as a senator, and perilled his high reputation as a professing Christian.—State Guard.

MIDDLECREEK RAILROAD.—We learn authoritatively that an arrangement was made last week between the Shade Mountain Iron Company and the Board of Directors of the M. C. R. R., by which the road is to be graded from Selinsgrove to Beaver Furnace, a distance of twelve miles, by the first of August—the contractor having ratified this part—and the ties and rails will immediately thereafter be laid and the cars run this Fall. By this arrangement the S. M. Iron Company will furnish the rails, fifty-six pounds to the yard, and agree to take out the cost in transportation, so that twelve miles of the railroad will be laid without the expenditure of a single dollar over and above the cost of laying the track. Mr. Alexander, the President, has thus far been most fortunate in pushing ahead this important link in railroad communication, and if nothing untoward occurs, we may now safely predict that the cars will run from Lewistown to Northumberland before the close of 1869.

John McFarland, of Northumberland, an energetic business man, was elected a Director in place of John A. McKee, Esq., resigned—the latter now filling the positions of Secretary and Treasurer.—Lewistown Gazette.

THE ingenuity of Radical newspapers is wonderful. The last instance which has come to our notice is, that President Johnson is insane from the use of opium. In defence of this statement it is alleged that no sane President would have alluded to the immaculate Forney as a "dead duck" or have spoken "in such harsh, vulgar, and abusive language as Mr. Johnson constantly applied to Congress." This charge was made against Mr. Johnson before the end of the Impeachment trial, and it was suggested gravely that his counsel should plead insanity for his defence It is not easy to perceive the force of this argument nor to convince sensible men that the "dead duck" is not more dead than ever. But if abuse, abundant and outrageous, is any proof of insanity what is to be said of Sumner, Wade, Stevens, Butler and Co. The remarks of the President fade into nothingness when compared with the pompous and pedantic insults of the Massachusetts bigot, or the blasphemous ravings of Wade and Stevens. The character of Butler transforms insults offered by him, into compliments, when applied to a gentleman. Hypocrisy thy name is Radicalism.

BEN. BUTLER made himself famous in New Orleans by his war on women, and to keep his exploits fresh in the minds of the people has commenced persecuting Miss Vinnie Ream, an accomplished young sculptress in Washington, whom Congress commissioned some time ago to make a statue of President Lincoln. After failing to get her to use her influence with Senator Ross to vote for convicting the President, they have assailed her character, and have ordered her out of he studio in the basement of the capitol, and thus destroyed her model, which cannot be removed. What a pitiful spectacle the American Congress presents!

HAS the man on horseback spoken? Said the Tribune, editorially August 17' 1867: "Probably General Grant can "afford to be a deaf and dumb candi- "date, but this country cannot afford "to elect a deaf and dumb President."

THEM STAMPS.

P. JOHN, in a column
Of twaddle most solemn,
In writhing and pain,
Goes on to explain,
That once on a time
In the present regime;
He sent an envelope
Marked "Paid," "Registered;"
And though the time's well up,
Has never yet heard
What became of the letter,
Which is said to contain
The stamps which are lost,
To Palemen's sad cost.
'Tis really absurd;
But had he not better
Just prove, not explain,
What that much travelled billet
In fact, did contain?
For you see, it won't do
To assert that therein,
Were hundreds of dollars
Of Radical "tin;"
For no man has seen
The contents, I ween,
And therefore can't swear
The stamps were in there:
And letters of Mercur
And Rollins & Co,
On a subject like that
Are not just the go;
And can never enure
To Palemon's behoof,
And all for the want of
Legitimate proof.

WASHINGTON D. C. 127, G. St. June 6th 1868

MR. EDITOR:—The minority in Congress since the impeachment has received an added strength not to be measured by their numbers, and much of it is due to the clear and able logic of the Senator from your County.

His definite conclusions from well established principles always command respect, and in conjunction with Senator Hendricks modify party legislation.

While the majority have been ringing the changes on old time progress, the listeners in the galleries have heard him advance ideas on the rights of minorities which to day are the study of leading minds in England.

Closely connected with this is the burden of taxation, and it would be a useful process to trace the comforts, not to say pleasures which the producing class have relinquished on account of our enormous public debt.

The fertilising stream flows downwards not upwards, and statesmen of the future will not think it progress to take from the rights of the middle class to support those who have not earned the benefits of a higher civilization.

Gen. Butler has assumed control of Radicalism and is increasing his prestige as a leader by creating a prison in the capitol and ejecting Vinnie Ream from her studio.

Her enthusiasm in the profession she has chosen will not make it a Dutch gap for her, and we trust that in another studio she will have added inspiration, to complete her statue of Lincoln, and convince all by her success, that the appropriation of Congress was just.

The excitement of the municipal election pervaded all classes and resulted in the loss of life. The teachings in regard to suffrage have not been judicious when colored washwomen comment thus. "Do you know such a person voted secesh and is to be imprisoned for it."

Suffrage is a right belonging to intelligence and good judgment, but is too after controlled by party spirit, and wise legislation would have given it is a reward for improvement to those recently liberated from slavery.

S. M. M.

WE must congratulate Washington City. If reports be true, Forney having retired from the Secretaryship of the Senate, is about to sell out one of his "two papers both daily," the Chronicle, and leave the city. To be sure Philadelphia, his proposed residence hereafter, will suffer somewhat from the change, but he will have lost some of his power to do evil, in giving up his official position and will have his hands hands full in creating dissensions in his own party as he will doubtless do. There is probably no Radical in the country who can so nearly attain to the eminence of Ben. Butler as "Col." John W. Forney. We wish Was hington joy of the happy deliverance.

THE PATRIOT & UNION.—This time-honored Democratic journal has been purchased by Messrs Myers, Brown and Moore, and the first number of the "Morning Patriot" under their management was issued on last Monday. It has been enlarged to a 32 column Daily, and in size, appearance and ability, takes its rank among the first class dailies of the country. It has full and complete telegraphic despatches, and a corps of competent correspondents. Being the only Democratic paper published at the capital of the State, we trust it will be sustained by the party. We hope some arrangement may be made by which it can be received here the day of its publication. If so, many subscribers can be procured for the daily.

A NEW OFFICE.—The Registry law passed by the late Legislature establishes another new office—that of Registration Commissioner. It is the duty of the Commissioner to make a registry of all the voters, and the office should therefore be filled by an intelligent and well-informed man. It is presumed that the salary will be paid by the County Commissioners.

We find the above paragraph going the rounds of the Press. We do not believe the Registry law, so-called, creates any such office. It is but a device to take more money from the tax-payers.

A SERIOUS accident occurred yesterday, on the Catawissa Road, at the creek just above Catawissa. The wood train ran over a cow, belonging to C. Rahn, Esq., and was precipitated over the abutment of the Catawissa Bridge, into the water a distance of some 12 feet, almost instantly killing a woodsawyer, by the name of Mr. Redbender. The passengers, baggage and mails of the Philadelphia train, which came up immediately, were transferred to the special Train and passed on to Sunbury.—Standard.

McCOOLE and Coburn, the prize fighters, were arrested in Indiana while on their way to a bruising match and have been indicted by a Grand Jury at Lawrenceburg Ind., and sentenced to forty days' imprisonment, which term they are now serving out in the jail of that county.

GALENA, the home of General Grant, answered the voice of Oregon by electing the whole Democratic ticket, on Friday last, by three hundred majority. Every election that takes place points to one result—a crushing defeat of the Radical party and its expediency candidate in November next.

The Columbian.

BLOOMSBURG, FRIDAY, JUNE 19, '68.

SHERIFF J. H. FURMAN has been appointed tax collector for this Township during the present year.

THE nomination of Gen. McClellan as Minister to England was rejected by the Senate on Saturday.

WE learn that Deputy Assessor John Thomas, has closed Reuben Miller's Distillery at Foundryville.

ANDREW MADISON of Jerseytown has sold out his establishment in that place to Daniel Robbins Johnston.

THE board walk leading to the L. & B. R. R. Depot is in a ruinous and dangerous condition. If not soon repaired, it should be entirely removed, before some accident occurs.

THEFT.—On Tuesday night of last week Stephen Pohe, of Centre township had all his carriage, team, and other harness stolen from his barn. The team harness he had just purchased for $40.00

TWO young sons of Joshua and Jacob Gruver, of Hollenback township Luzerne county, one day last week were playing with a hatchet, when the one struck the other in the eye, blinding him for life.

THE Hazleton Sentinel is so much improved that we scarcely knew it. The new type, superior make-up, &c., place it on the list of first-class country papers. It claims to be independent in politics.

ACCIDENT.—A young man named William Miller had his leg broken in two places on Monday last, whilst felling trees on the farm of Thomas J. Vandersline, by one of them striking his leg in falling.

THE "rooster" of the Sunbury Gazette having become useless, has been put at the head of an advertisement. Can't some Borough or Township go Republican just to give him a chance to crow?

THE Catawissa Railroad Company have concluded to extend their road from Milton to Williamsport, on the east side of the river, passing through M'Ewensville, and near Turbotville, thus tapping the rich agricultural region in the upper end of Northumberland county.

MR. STEPHEN KUHN has erected an iron front on the building on Main St, known as the "Maus house." It is the first of its kind in this place but we are sure that others will speedily follow his good example, and render their buildings, ornamentel as well as strong and proof against fire.

THE COLUMBIAN always has the regular Democratic ticket standing in its columns; and it never takes it down, and puts up a bogus one in its place, as some professedly Democratic papers are in the habit of doing. It is firm, reliable and consistent, and is the best, largest, and cheapest paper in the county.

SCHOOL MATTERS.—The School Board of Bloom Township have resolved to have seven months of school during the present school year and to lay about $4,000 tax for school purposes, and $2,000 for building purposes. Last year the rate was seven mills on the dollar. This year, owing to the increase in value of property, it is thought five mills will produce the sum required.

HON. C. R. BUCKALEW.—Some of our Democratic exchanges are in favor of Hon. C. R. Buckalew, one of our Senators in Congress, as a candidate for Vice President, on their ticket. Mr. Buckalew is certainly one of the ablest men of the Opposition, and so far as statesmanship is concerned, would reflect credit on the choice; but being allied to the party which the people have doomed to defeat, he must share its "manifest destiny."—Montour American.

WE have been presented with a piece of wood, taken from an oak tree on the farm of D. R. Appleman, which tree was found under ground at the depth of seven feet six inches. The change in the bed of the creek left a portion exposed. It is impossible to tell how long the tree has lain there. A walnut tree eighteen inches in diameter has grown over the prostrate trunk. The wood is perfectly sound and free from decay as far as it can be seen. A wonderful instance of preservation.

GEN. GRANT.—In another column our readers will find an advertisement of the "Personal History of Gen. Grant." His biographers are numerous, but among them we do not know of one more competent to perform the task than Richardson, the author of that entertaining work "Beyond the Mississippi." As Grant has been placed in nomination for President by the Radicals we doubt not that his "Life" will be eagerly sought after by his friends. Those desiring agencies, or wishing to purchase should read the advertisement.

SINGULAR VERY!—We are informed on reliable authority, that a pheasant's nest was lately discovered on the property of Mr. Peter Jacoby which contained eleven eggs. Some time after its discovery Mr. Jacoby in passing by the nest noticed therein a large black snake, who, upon investigation, was found to have swallowed all the eggs. His snakeship having been killed, the eggs, with the exception of three wich were broken, were taken from his stomach, and replaced in the nest. The mother, resuming her family duties, succeeded in hatching all but two. The snake was a very large one measuring five feet, nine inches in length.

A NUMBER of citizens both here and elsewhere have lately had sent to them, from Read & Co, New York, certificates notifying them that they had drawn a prize worth $200 which would be sent on payment of $10. It is needless to say that this is an unqualified swindle and that those who part with $10 for this purpose have taken a final leave thereof. We have just learned that Read & Co. have been arrested at the instance of a victim from Mauch Chunk, it having been found impossible to obtain the prize which, it was announced, he had drawn. We trust that none of our readers will be foolish enough to throw their money away on so palpable a fraud as this.

NO. LXI.

CAMINO REAL TO GUARANDA.

CAMINO REAL signifies "royal road," and it is believed that a branch of the Inca highway led to this point. As this road was one of the marvels of Ecuador, a description of it may not be uninteresting. It would seem that when the Peruvians under Huayna Capa conquered the inhabitants of Ecuador, there were no means of communication between the conquerors and conquered. The idea of building a magnificent causeway from Cuzco to Quito was at once conceived and executed. The natives worked with surprising energy, and overcame apparently insurmountable obstacles. Valleys were filled up, rocks excavated, and when finished it is said to have been so smooth and level that a coach might have been safely driven over it. It has since suffered a great deal by the wars between the Peruvians and Spaniards, but enough remains to attest the grandness of the enterprise. On the sides of this road, and nearly at equal distances apart, there were small houses built of well cut freestone. These buildings answered the purpose of stations, and were called tambos or Inca-pilcas. Some were surrounded by a sort of fortification; others were destined for baths, and had arrangements for the conveyance of warm water; while the larger ones were intended exclusively for the family of the sovereign.

The road has a deep understructure. None of the Roman works are as imposing as this work of the ancient Peruvians; and the Inca road is the more extraordinary as at some points it attains an elevation of 15,526 feet above sea level; or almost as high as Mont Blanc, and over 3000 feet higher than the peak of Teneriffe. The grandest remains exist between Loxa and the Amazon, near the baths of the Incas on the paramo of Chulucanas, and also near Ingatamba. The ruins at the latter place are situated so low that the difference of elevation between it and the paramo del Assuay is upwards of 9,700 feet. The distance in a direct line is 184 miles; and the ascent of the road is about 3,750 feet greater than the elevation of the pass of Mt. Cenis, above the lake of Como.

There were two great causeways, paved with flat stones, and in places covered with cemented gravel. One of these lines of road runs through the broad and barren plain lying between the sea-coast and the chain of the Andes, whilst the other passes along the ridge of the Cordilleras. Stones marking the distances at equal intervals are frequently seen. The rivulets and ravines were crossed by bridges of three kinds; some being of stone, some of wood, and others of rope. There were also aqueducts for conveying water to the tambos and fortresses. Both lines of road were directed to Cuzco, then the central point and capital of the Peruvian empire, situated 11,378 feet above sea-level. As the Peruvians had no wheeled carriages, these roads were constructed for the march of troops, for the conveyance of burdens borne by men, and for flocks of slightly laden llamas; consequently long flights of steps with resting places were cut in the steep part of the mountain. These steps were formidable impediments to the advance of the Spaniards, who at first rode horses instead of the sure-footed mule which seems to reflect on each step it takes. The length of the road is estimated at 1500 miles. Sarmiento says: "The Emperor Charles with all his power could not have accomplished even a part of what was done by the well directed Government of the Incas, and the obedient race of people under their rule." It should also be borne in mind that this race were even unacquainted with the uses of iron. But to return to our journey.

The following morning was bright and beautiful, so we were soon astir, and before breakfasting rode forward some six miles to a place called La China, and there stopped at a miserable hovel, no better place offering. The road to this point from near Camino Real is descending, but from there to the bottom of the valley the path is exceedingly difficult, and sometimes dangerous. This, however, is the best cultivated section I saw in Ecuador. The climate is mild and equable; and though the inhabitants are steeped in the deepest ignorance, yet they seem happy and contented, neither knowing nor caring to know what occurs in the outer world, and in blissful ignorance of books, newspapers, rail-roads, and other elements of modern civilization.

By the advice of Dr. Jameson we now left the direct road to Guaranda, and towards evening reached the town of San Jose de Chimbo, where we were comparatively well taken care of. In our day's journey we had passed an unusual number of skulls. Whenever a person is murdered he is buried by the road side, and a cross erected over him at the foot of which the passer-by deposits a stone. In process of time the soil is washed from the bodies, and thus they become exposed. The Indiansare very superstitious concerning these spots, and always make the sign of the cross in passing them. We saw no trees of any size, but this deficiency was supplied in a great measure by the large numbers of beautiful flowers and bushes, which excited our admiration by their variegated colors and sweet scent. Innumerable flocks of parrots were also on the wing, making the valley ring with their insufferable screaming.

After a good night's rest we resumed our journey, and about a league from Guaranda crossed a singular bridge called a soachon. The stream had been diverted from its channel, and passed through an arch 20 or 30 feet above the river, leaving the traveller to cross the ancient bed without danger or difficulty. About 2 P. M. we reached Guaranda, where we were glad to find a posado or inn. In fact the appointments were luxurious as the place had glass windows, chairs, and cracket-steads! True there was an immense amount of filth and dust, and an innumerable army of fleas, but these were drawbacks for which a warm meal amply compensated.

Guaranda is the principal resting place on the journey from Guayaquil to Quito, and is a town of some importance, containing about 8,000 inhabitants. As it is situated at the foot of Chimborazo, travellers generally stop there a few days to rest, and to hire fresh mules and arrieros, as well as to lay in a fresh stock of provisions preparatory to crossing the mountains, which loom up in the advance like mighty giants guarding the approach to fairy land.

The next day, Sunday, was a lively one indeed for the natives, being their regular market and feasting day. Our luggage not having arrived, and not knowing what might be the cause of its detention in that rough and only partially civilized country, we despatched an officer after it. He returned with it the next day explaining that some soldiers had seized the mules for their own purposes; and to confirm his report pointed to the oxen on which our baggage was placed. The soldiers, numbering about 1,000, had passed through Guaranda the day before on their way to Guayaquil, which point was threatened by an attack from the Peruvian navy. As the port is totally undefended, great consternation existed in the Republic. The soldiers were fair specimens of Ecuadorian chivalry, being illy clad, bare-footed, mounted on mules, and each one armed with a lance. I should like to see them charge a battery. We did not push on at once owing to Alicia's serious illness, for whom we could find no suitable conveniences, and who seemed scarcely able to face the chilling blasts of Chimborazo.

QUIEN SABE.

SINCE the failure of Impeachment, the proceedings in Congress have been exceedingly dull. Reconstructing reconstruction, and the confinement of American citizens in the Capitol dungeons, seem to be the chief business of the session. Congress will probably adjourn within a month.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

DEBILITY.

Every one at times feels the necessity of something to tone up the system depressed by mental or bodily exhaustion. At such times let every one instead of taking alcoholic or medicinal stimulants, which afford only a temporary relief, revivigorate his debilitated system by the natural tonic elements of the or Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, which vitalizes and enriches the blood by supplying it with its life Element, Iron.

Being free from Alcohol in any form, its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor and new life into all parts of the system, and building up an Iron Constitution.

Wm. C. Sterling, Esq., of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., says: "Since taking the Peruvian syrup I feel better, my strength is improved, my bowels are regular, my appetite first rate.

There is an old Physician in this city older than I am, who has been in the Drug business for 40 years, who has used the syrup for three months, and gives it as his decided opinion, that it is the best Alterative Tonic Medicine he ever knew."

For Dyspepsia, Debility, and Female Weaknesses, the Peruvian Syrup is a specific. A 32 page pamphlet sent free. The genuine has "Peruvian syrup" blown in the glass. J. P. DINSMORE, Proprietor, No. 30 Dey St., New York. Sold by all Druggists.

The great amount of time consumed by the ladies in dressing and arranging their hair must make any article which would lessen their labor particularly acceptable. Ring's Vegetable Amberosia leaves the hair in such condition as to render the dressing and arranging a very easy matter. It imparts to it that splendid glossy appearance so much admired, cleanses the scalp from dandruff and all humors, and prevents baldness; promotes its growth and restores gray hair to its original color. 4t

The reason why Mishler's Herb Bitters cures so many different diseases, is because it is the best remedy for a deranged stomach, or Dyspepsia now known, and because it invigorates the entire system, strengthens the nervous fibres, elevates the standard of all the vital forces and sustains a most healthful tone of the entire human organism. Medicine that will do this will cure any disease for the simple reason, that nature will do the rest.

We guarantee that no woman or child, however pale and emaciated, can use those Bitters regularly for twenty days, without the return of the rosy cheeks and fair complexion characteristic of good health. Sold by all Druggists and Dealers.

It imparts a tone and vigor to the whole system, strengthens the appetite, causes an enjoyment of the food, enables the stomach to digest it, purifies the blood, gives a good, sound, healthy complexion, eradicates the yellow tinge from the eyes, imparts a bloom to the cheek, and changes the patient from a short-breathed, emaciated, weak and nervous invalid, to a full-faced, stout and vigorous person. "Hoofland's German Bitters" is entirely free from all alcoholic admixture.

Timely Garden Hints.

WHEN the fruit of your Strawberry beds is swelling they should be plentifully watered in the absence of rain. It has a marked effect upon the perfectness and size of the berry.

Rub off all the sprouts upon the stocks which you have set with grafts this spring. It will help to push along the growth of the scion. Not unfrequently, grafts, after they have started, die for want of sap from the parent stem to sustain them.

The trees transplanted this spring should be mulched as soon as the ground becomes dry. For this purpose grass is as good as anything. Don't put around the tree too much at a time, and repeat the mulch when it gets dry and thin. Remove it once or twice during the summer, and stir up the ground well, then replace it. It will save many a tree, if the season should be hot and dry, which we think this season will be.

Your Raspberry and Blackberry beds should also be well mulched. Any quantity of dry stuff about a place, especially leaves, scrapings, etc., will do. An application of the contents of a hot bed is very beneficial.

A few radish seeds planted around your canteloupe hills will ordinarily protect the vine against the striped bug. This dangerous enemy of the melon prefers the radish to the melon leaves; and thus, while feeding on the radish, the other gets the start of it and pushes on out of reach of danger, as the leaf of the melon is attacked only when very young and tender.

When your flower plants get from an inch and a half to two inches high, they can be thinned out and transplanted. It should be done after a rain, or the ground from which they are taken and whither they are put should be thoroughly moistened.

Radishes always do better when planted in new ground, or at least ground where they have not heretofore been. Old gardens are the worst places in the world for radishes. You will rarely obtain any sound ones. Clay mixed with the old soil vitalizes it greatly and will produce good radishes.

Tomatoes, Egg and Cabbage plants, after being set out, generally become somewhat wilted in their leaves, and lose some of them from the effects of the sun before they become established. This can be prevented by setting over the plant, say from eight to nine or four to five o'clock in the day, boxes in the shape of cones about fourteen inches in height, open at the top. They also protect the plants against frost. By the use of these boxes a week is gained in time, and sometimes the plants saved from severe or fatal injury. The boxes will last twelve or fifteen years.

If you find any of your evergreens to become lighter in color than is natural for them; or, rather if you wish the deepest green attainable, give them a thorough dressing of good barn-yard manure, extending as far out as the extremity of the branches, and you will accomplish your wish.

If shrubbery or fruit trees transplanted this season look sickly or backward in growing, prune them sharply. It is the only way to save them, their setting out and other things being duly attended to.

All Raspberry and Blackberry canes set out this spring should be cut down to within six inches of the ground, if not done when set out. It will insure the growth of the new wood, and they will come into fine bearing order next year; whereas, should the canes be allowed to remain only partially pruned, as other bearing wood, there may be a small crop of poor fruit, and only about half a crop next year. Some people are so eager to get fruit at once that they totally neglect this advice.

Those who have not set out "cuttings" of grapes, shrubbery, etc., can lay the branches down, say two inches under ground, letting the end of the branch appear. Sometimes it will require a forked stick to hold them in their places. A grapevine can be laid down its whole length, and if carefully done will throw out a sprout from each joint, making a beautiful arrangement for the trellis.—Germantown Telegraph.

Growing Onions.

THE high figures at which onions have been sold the past season will probably induce a more extended cultivation of this most valuable of vegetables. The most successful onion grower on a somewhat limited scale, we ever saw, kept his ground in high tilth, forming a deep, rich bed for the seed. The soil was thoroughly stirred to the depth of a foot or more, and finally pulverized. When thus prepared, the party commenced tramping across the beds in the line of the extended rows, thus compacting the soil quite hard. This done, a rake was used to stir up or scarify the surface sufficiently deep to cover the onion seeds lightly or to assure its germination. In thus tramping the onion bed down, after the soil has been properly stirred and prepared, the onions was grown, during the prepared, the onion was grown, during the period of its growth, upon the surface, causing it to expand with more freedom than would have been the case if covered deep in a mellow soil. The result of this mode of planting and cultivation was the most prolific yield of the best developed onions we ever saw. This mode was pursued year after year, and with unavarying success.—Rural New Yorker.

Pruning.

CUT down every worn out and worthless tree. It shades and saps the ground usually with a clump of suckers. Cut away all sprouts from the roots of your trees. An hour spent around a good tree is time well invested. We have been pained at seeing so many orchards utterly neglected in this State. Good farms in other respects are frequently disfigured by these unsightly orchards. It should not be so. There is no reason why a man who looks well after his horses, and sheep, should not also look well to his orchard.—Maine Farmer.

WOOD ASHES FOR STRAWBERRIES.—There is no better fertilizer for Strawberries than ashes. A contemporary says one of the best crops he ever had was raised when the only manure used was wood ashes. All soils will not alike be benefited by such an application; but it is always safe to use ashes in connection with other manures. If ashes only are used, there are fewer weeds, as no seed can be introduced by the manure.

For the Young Folks.

Donkey-wort.

A MERRY young huntsman, named Peter, was once riding briskly along through a wood, one while winding his horn and another singing a merry song:—

"Merrily rides the huntsman bold,
Blithesome and gay rides he;
He winds his horn, and he bends his bow,
Under the green wood tree."

As he journeyed along, there came up a little old woman, and said to him, "Good day, good day, Mr. Huntsman bold! you seem merry enough, but I am hungry and thirsty; do pray give me something to eat." So Peter took pity on her and put his hand in his pocket, and gave her what he had. Then he wanted to go his way; but she took hold of him, and said, "Listen Master Peter, to what I am going to tell you; I will reward your kindness. Go your way, and after a little time you will come to a tree, where you will see nine birds sitting upon a cloak. Shoot into the midst of them, and one will fall down dead. The cloak will fall too; take it as a wishing-cloak, and when you wear it, you will find yourself at any place you may wish to be. Cut open the dead bird, take out its heart and keep it, and you will find a piece of gold under your pillow every morning when you rise. It is the bird's heart that will bring you this good luck."

The huntsman thanked her, and thought to himself. "If all this do happen, it will be a fine thing for me." When he had gone a hundred steps or so, he heard a screaming and chirping in the branches over him; so he looked up, and saw a flock of birds, pulling a cloak with their bills and feet; screaming, fighting, and tugging at each other as if each wished to have it himself. "Well," said the huntsman, "this is wonderful; this happens just as the old woman said." Then he shot into the midst of them, so that their feathers flew all about. Off went the flock chattering away; but one fell down dead, and the cloak with it. Then Peter did as the old woman told him, cut open the bird took out the heart, and carried the cloak home with him.

The next morning, when he awoke, he lifted up his pillow, and there lay the piece of gold glittering underneath; the same happened next day, and, indeed, every day when he arose. He heaped up a great deal of gold, and at last thought to himself, "Of what use is this gold to me whilst I am at home? I will go out into the world, and look about me."

Then he took leave of his friends, and hung his horn and bow about his neck, and went his way merrily as before, singing his song:—

"Merrily rides the huntsman bold,
Blithesome and gay rides he;
He winds his horn, and he bends his bow,
Under the green wood tree."

Now it happened that his road led through a thick wood, at the end of which was a large castle in a green meadow; and at one of the windows stood an old woman, with a very beautiful young lady by her side, looking about them. The old woman was a fairy, and she said to the young lady, whose name was Meta. "There comes a young man out of the wood, with a wonderful prize; we must get it away from him, my dear child, for it is more fit for us than for him. He has a bird's heart that brings a piece of gold under his pillow every morning." Meantime the huntsman came nearer, and looked at the lady, and said to himself, "I have been travelling so long, that I should like to go into this castle and rest myself, for I have money enough to pay for anything I want;" but the real reason was, that he wanted to see more of the beautiful lady. Then he went into the house, and was welcomed kindly; and it was not long before he was so much in love, that he thought of nothing else but looking at Meta's eyes, and doing everything that she wished. Then the old woman said, "Now is the time for getting the bird's heart." So Meta stole it away, and he never found any more gold under his pillow; for it lay now under Meta's, and the old woman took it away every morning; but he was so much in love that he never missed his prize.

"Well," said the old fairy, "we have got the bird's heart, but not the wishing-cloak yet, and that we must also get," "Let us leave him that," said Meta; "he has already lost all his wealth." Then the fairy was very angry, and said, "Such a cloak is a very rare and wonderful thing, and I must and will have it." So Meta did as the old woman told her, and sat herself at the window, and looked about the country, and seemed very sorrowful. Then the huntsman said, "What makes you so sad?" "Alas, dear sir," said she, "yonder lies the granite rock, where all the costly diamonds grow, and I want so much to go there, that, whenever I think of it, I cannot help being sorrowful; for who can reach it? only the birds and the flies,—man cannot." "If that's all your grief," said huntsman Peter, "I'll take you there with all my heart." So he drew her under his cloak, and the moment he wished to be on the granite mountain, they were both there.

The diamonds glittered so on all sides, that they were delighted with the sight, and picked up the finest. But the old fairy made a deep drowsiness come upon him; and he said to the young lady, "Let us sit down and rest ourselves a little, I am so tired that I cannot stand any longer." So they sat down, and he laid his head in her lap and fell asleep; and whilst he was sleeping on, the false Meta took the cloak from his shoulders, hung it on her own, picked up the diamonds, and wished herself at her own home again.

When poor Peter awoke, and found that his faithless Meta had tricked him, and left him alone on the wild rock, he said, "Alas what roguery there is in the world!" And there he sat in great grief and fear upon the mountain, not knowing what in the world he should do.

Now this rock belonged to fierce giants, who lived upon it; and as he saw three of them striding about, he thought to himself, "I can only save myself by feigning to be asleep;" so he laid himself down, as if he were in a sound sleep. When the giants came to him, the first kicked him with his foot, and said, "What worm is this that lies here curled up?" "Tread upon him and kill him," said the second. "It's not worth the trouble," said the third; "let him live: he will go climbing higher up the mountain, and some cloud will come rolling and carry him away."

DRUGS & MEDICINES.

HOOFLAND'S

GERMAN BITTERS.

HOOFLAND'S GERMAN BITTERS,
AND
Hoofland's German Tonic.
Prepared by Dr. C. M. Jackson,
PHILADELPHIA, PA.

The Great Remedies
FOR ALL DISEASES OF THE LIVER, STOMACH, or DIGESTIVE ORGANS.

Hoofland's German Bitters
Is compounded of the pure juices, (or as they are medicinally termed, Extracts) of Roots, Herbs and Barks, making a preparation, highly concentrated, and entirely free from Alcoholic admixture of any kind.

Hoofland's German Tonic,
Is a combination of all the ingredients of the Bitters, with the purest quality of Santa Cruz Rum, Orange, etc., making one of the most pleasant and agreeable remedies ever offered to the public.

Those preferring a Medicine free from Alcoholic admixture, will use

Hoofland's German Bitters.
In cases of nervous depression, when some alcoholic stimulus is necessary,

Hoofland's German Tonic
should be used.

The Bitters or the Tonic are both equally good, and contain the same medicinal virtues.

The stomach, from a variety of causes, such as Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Nervous Debility, etc., is rendered very apt to have its functions deranged. The result of which is, sufferers from several or more of the following diseases:

Constipation, Flatulence, Inward Piles, Fulness of Blood to the Head, Acidity of the Stomach, Nausea, Heartburn, Disgust for Food, Fulness or Weight in the Stomach, Sour Eructations, Sinking or Fluttering at the Pit of the Stomach, Swimming of the Head, Hurried or Difficult Breathing, Fluttering at the Heart, Choking or Suffocating Sensations when in a Lying Posture, Dimness of Vision, Dots or Webs before the Sight, Dull Pain in the Head, Deficiency of Perspiration, Yellowness of the Skin and Eyes, Pain in the Side, Back, Chest, Limbs, etc. Sudden Flushes of Heat, Burning in the Flesh, Constant Imaginings of Evil, and Great Depression of Spirits.

These remedies will effectually cure Liver Complaint, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Chronic or Nervous Debility, Chronic Diarrhœa, Diseases of the Kidneys, and all Diseases arising from a Disordered Liver, Stomach, or Intestines.

DEBILITY,
RESULTING FROM ANY CAUSE WHATEVER;
PROSTRATION OF THE SYSTEM,
INDUCED BY SEVERE LABOR, HARDSHIPS, EXPOSURE, FEVERS, ETC.

There is no medicine extant equal to these remedies in such cases. A tone and vigor is imparted to the whole System, the Appetite is Strengthened, food is enjoyed, the stomach digests promptly, the blood is purified, the complexion becomes sound and healthy, the yellow tinge is eradicated from the eyes, a bloom is given to the cheeks, and the weak and nervous invalid becomes a strong and healthy being.

Persons Advanced in Life,
And feeling the hand of time weighing heavily upon them, with all its attendant ills, will find in the use of this BITTERS, or the TONIC, an ally that will instil new life into their veins, restore in a measure the energy and ardor of more youthful days, build up their shrunken forms, and give health and happiness to their remaining years.

NOTICE.
It is a well-established fact that fully one half of the female population are seldom in the enjoyment of good health, or, to use their own expression, "never feel well." They are languid, devoid of all energy, extremely nervous, and have no appetite.

To this class of persons the BITTERS, or the TONIC, is especially recommended.

WEAK AND DELICATE CHILDREN
Are made strong by the use of either of these remedies. They will cure every case of MARASMUS, without fail.

Thousands of certificates have accumulated in the hands of the proprietor, but space will allow of the publication of but a few. Those, it will be observed, are men of note and of such standing that they must be believed.

TESTIMONIALS.

Hon. Geo. W. Woodward,
Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Pa., writes.

"I find 'Hoofland's German Bitters' a valuable medicine in case of attacks of indigestion or dyspepsia. I can certify this from my experience of it.
"Yours, with respect,

Hon. James Thompson,
Judge of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania.
Philadelphia, April 28, 1866
"I consider 'Hoofland's German Bitters' a valuable medicine in case of attacks of indigestion or dyspepsia. I can certify this from my experience of it.
"Yours, with respect,
"JAMES THOMPSON."

From Rev. Joseph H. Kennard, D.D.
Pastor of the Tenth Baptist Church, Philadelphia.
Dr. Jackson—Dear Sir: I have been frequently requested to connect my name with certificates of the benefits derived by the use of medicines, but have refrained from doing so, preferring rather to let the medicines speak for themselves. In some cases, however, I have consented, especially in my own family, to the use of Dr. Hoofland's German Bitters. I deem it my duty now to say that, for general debility, for dyspepsia, and especially for Liver Complaint, it is a safe and valuable preparation. It must prove a public benefit, but seriously I doubt not, it will be a very great boon to those who suffer from the above causes.
Yours, very respectfully,
J. H. KENNARD,
Eighth, below Coates St.

From Rev. E. D. Fendall,
Assistant Editor Christian Chronicle, Philadelphia.
I have derived decided benefit from the use of Hoofland's German Bitters. Feel free to use my privileges to recommend them as a most valuable tonic to all who are suffering from general debility or from diseases arising from derangement of the liver.
Yours truly,
E. D. FENDALL.
